The following periodicals have been recommended by librarians for use with youngsters of elementary through high school age. Each title is coded to show the professionally compiled list or lists on which it has been cited.

Where title changes or mergers of magazines have occurred since those primary lists appeared, titles are given in their current form, as of Spring 1969, with cross-references supplied from older forms. For those few magazines which cannot be ordered through a subscription agency, publishers' addresses are supplied.

Like titles, the prices and frequencies of magazines are subject to change; to the best of our knowledge, the information given here is correct as of Spring 1969. The frequency of each periodical is supplied within parentheses after its title. If it is not a regular weekly, monthly, quarterly or the like, the number of issues per year is noted. Typically, many magazines issued ten times a year come out monthly during most of the school year but skip issues during the period from June through September. Similarly, many classroom magazines and teacher aids only appear during the fall and spring semesters. During these periods they are likely to appear weekly or monthly.

Unless otherwise indicated, the price given is that which applies to a school or public library buying a single one-year subscription. Naturally these prices have been set by the magazines involved rather than by the subscription agency. It is customary for magazines to set a scale of rates differentiating between subscriptions of varying lengths ordered by different types of professionals and institutions. Thus it is frequently cheaper to get a three-year subscription to a given periodical than to order for one year three times in a row. A school or teacher may be eligible for a bargain rate. Similarly, many magazines cut their rates substantially for the customer, individual or institutional, who orders multiple copies. This is particularly true for classroom magazines.

Although space considerations permit only an abbreviated listing of prices here, the Franklin Square Agency maintains complex, up-to-date records of the various rates each magazine has set. Without exception we try to fill each order at the lowest applicable rate. We will be happy to supply more detailed rate information on request.

Special thanks are due to Lavinia G. Dobler, head librarian, Scholastic Magazines, Inc., and Mrs. Barbara Toplin, children's librarian, Teaneck (N.J.) Public Library, for their aid in locating basic source materials.
